

September 15, 2011

Questions & Answers regarding the new GET unit price

Why did the unit price increase?

The GET unit price reflects current tuition increases as well as long term projections for future tuition. It also includes projections for investment returns, administrative costs, and a reserve to adjust for periods of higher-than-expected tuition increases or lower-than-expected returns (both of which have occurred over the past three years).

State budget allocations to our state universities, which previously have helped offset the cost of education, have decreased markedly – as much as 37% in just 3 years. As a result, universities have had no choice but to increase tuition and place a greater share of the cost on the individual student and his or her family. Unfortunately, projections are for continued double digit tuition increases for at least the next 4 -5 years.

Since the GET Program guarantees it will cover the cost of future tuition, no matter how much it increases, the unit price must be strong enough to ensure long-term stability for the Program. It must be ready to pay college expenses, as promised, to the thousands of families who are saving for college with GET.

Who decides the new unit price?

The unit price is set by the GET Committee, which is chaired by the Executive Director of the Higher Education Coordinating Board. Its members include the State Treasurer, the Director of the Office of Financial Management, and two citizen members who are appointed by the Governor.

Review is also provided by the new Legislative Advisory Committee, comprised of 8 members from the House and Senate. The State Actuary analyzes all projections and recommends a unit price.

Will the new price apply to money I've contributed to my account since May 1, 2011?

The $163 unit price will be applied to all Lump Sum payments that have been received since May 1, 2011. (It won't affect your existing Custom Monthly Plan account that was opened by March 31, 2011.) If you've added Lump Sum money to your account since May 1 and no longer want to purchase units at the new price, you may submit a Refund Request form. Because the unit price was unknown, there is an extended grace period until October 10 where no refund penalty will apply to units purchased since May 1, 2011. Refund requests received after October 10 are subject to the normal refund policy.

Is it still worth it to save for college with a GET account?

A GET account is GUARANTEED to keep pace with tuition increases in the future and you can use the money to pay for college expenses almost anywhere. We're still seeing ups and downs in the stock market, and double digit increases in tuition are projected to continue over the next several years.

The earlier you can start saving, the greater benefit you will realize. You should plan to hold your account for 4-5 years before realizing a gain, so GET may be a better investment for parents or grandparents of younger children. Custom Monthly Plan accounts with a 7.5% interest rate will take longer to realize a gain.

If you want to save for college ...

START AS EARLY AS YOU CAN – Get started with a college savings program when your children are young and add to it over the years. GET makes a really solid foundation for your college savings because it is guaranteed.

SAVE WHATEVER YOU CAN – Remember you can buy units in any amount, even fractions of units, and it's the "saving" that counts. You know that college tuition is important and that it will continue to increase in cost.

Don't worry if you can't save 400 units; the average GET account holds less than 200 units. To save for two years of community college might be 70 units, or two years of a regional university might be 130 units. Some people just try to save $100 or $200 a month, then add to it on birthdays and holidays.

ASK FOR HELP – Grandparents, aunts, uncles, friends can all contribute to your GET account. Education is the gift of a lifetime! Also, don't get discouraged. Most families pay for college with a variety of resources, from 529 plans to grants, scholarships or loans to part-time work and personal savings.

When does enrollment open?

The new enrollment year will run November 1, 2011 - May 31, 2012. Newborns up to their first birthday may still be enrolled year-round.

New accounts (including new Custom Monthly Plans for current customers) must be opened by May 31, 2012 to qualify for the $163 unit price. The current unit price is scheduled to increase on July 1, 2012.